INTRODUCTION

A. VOCABULARY

THE Kurdish of this Dictionary is the standard language of belles-lettres, journalism, official and private correspondence, and formal speech as it has developed, on the basis of the Southern-Kirmanji dialect of Sulaimani in Iraq, since 1918, when Kurdish was established as the official language of the administration and of primary education in the liwa of that name and in parts of the liwas of Arbil and Kirkuk; it is moreover the language which has been adopted in Persia for Kurdish broadcasts and government-sponsored publications. A number of useful words current in Arbil and Kirkuk but not yet widely used in Sulaimani have been included, but dialectical variants of the same word have generally been ignored. Borrowings from dialects further afield have been indicated as follows: (N) Northern Kirmanji, (M) Mukri, (SN) Sanandaji (Ardalani), (G) Gorani including Bajalani and Hawrami. On the other hand, since our hope is that this work will contribute in some measure to the standardization of the literary language, we have felt obliged to exclude certain eccentricities which, though now frequently encountered in some sections of the Kurdish press, are repugnant to the genius of Kurdish and would better be forgotten.

As regards other loan words we have in general included, and marked (A), such Arabic words, whether in their original form or recognizable as such although recast in a Kurdish mould, as are felt to be completely naturalized, are in common use among all classes, or seem to meet a real need; it follows that not all Arabic words which the student will encounter in the course of his reading will be found in the dictionary. The case of Persian is rather different, since many words may reasonably be considered to belong equally to both languages; only recent and clearly distinguishable borrowings have been marked (P). Obvious loans from Turkish (T) and European languages (E) have also been indicated. Cross references are given to the Kurdish word or words which could be substituted for the foreign word in most contexts.

We have to thank Dr. C. T. Wahby for the English translations of many medical and anatomical terms. The names of plants and birds have presented a special difficulty, and the definitive fixation of this part of the vocabulary awaits the emergence of a new generation of trained Kurdish botanists and ornithologists; for a number of our identifications of plants we are indebted to Mr. Evan Guest of Kew. Where it has not been possible to give even a provisional translation of names current in Southern Kurdistan we have not hesitated, in these as in other specialized fields, to give a general indication such as 'name of a small bird', 'name of an aromatic herb', or 'name of a parlour game', as likely to help to make sense of passages the meaning of which might otherwise remain obscure; many of such botanical names we owe to Sheikh Muhammad-i Khal, who was good enough to send us copies of the first two parts of his Ferheng y Xal published at Sulaimani while this work was in course of preparation.

B. TRANSCRIPTION

At the present time in Iraq Kurdish writers generally use a modified Arabic alphabet based on a system devised by Wahby, accepted by the Ministry of Education for instruction in elementary schools, and published by him in his Kurdish Grammar, Qawā'id al-lughati 'l-kurdiya, parts I and II, Beirut, 1956 (an adaptation for Arab students of his earlier pioneering work, Destûr y Ziman y Kurdî, Baghdad, 1929-30). The Roman spelling here used is a close transliteration of this modified Arabic as set out on pp. ix and x. Since this is meant to be a practical alphabet for eventual everyday use we have thought it essential to avoid invented letters altogether, to reduce the number of diacritical marks as far as reasonably possible, and to choose for those that are indispensable symbols which seem to us pleasant to the eye and easy to write; for these reasons we have preferred the familiar digraphs ch, gh, and sh to possible alternatives such as ç, ğ, and ş. A specimen text will be found in Appendix VI.

C. ARRANGEMENT

1. General

The arrangement of the articles has presented several perplexing problems. After much trial and error we have worked out the scheme which we feel is open to the fewest objections. The general order is, of course, alphabetical but, subject to the derogations mentioned below, compound and derived words have been placed under the heading of the main word as far as possible. The swung dash ~ represents the main word or the part of it to the left of the oblique line. Homonyms are distinguished by small Arabic numerals. In a very few cases, e.g. the preposition BE, distinct uses of the same word have been given in separate articles so numbered. In Kurdish the stress is normally on the last syllable; exceptions are indicated thus: (: .), (. ' .), etc. The grammatical terminology is the traditional terminology of English. The parts of speech are indicated by the appropriate abbreviation placed immediately after the word. A certain amount of grammatical explanation will be found in the body of the dictionary, e.g. in the articles dealing with the prepositions LÊ, PÊ, and TÊ and with the pronominal affixes, and also in Appendixes IV and V.

2. Nouns and adjectives

These are arranged as follows: (a) the main word and its meanings, followed by idiomatic usages not falling under (b); (b) idiomatic usages of the main word in conjunction with particular verbs, simple and compound, arranged in the alphabetical order of the simple verbs; (c) derived and compound words of which the main word (or the part of it to the left of the oblique line) is the first element. Compound nouns and adjectives formed by the addition to the main word of the past participle or the present stem of a verb are given in brackets, generally introduced by the word hence, under (b) and not under (c). Where necessary idiomatic usages of the derived and compound words are given in brackets after each. In cases where the article would be inordinately long part (c), or both parts (b) and (c), are printed as separate articles. Nouns and adjectives are freely used as adverbs; those most commonly so used are indicated adv.

3. Prepositions

The use of the prepositions and of ÎZAFE (Y²), which in many of its uses is for all practical purposes equivalent to the preposition 'of', is highly idiomatic. The proper preposition for use in conjunction with a particular verb is indicated after the translation of the verb.

4. Verbs

(i) Verbs are quoted in the infinitive, followed by the present stem in brackets, and independently of the related nouns and adjectives, the only exception being adjectives formed by the addition of -î to the infinitive to give the meaning 'fit for', 'worthy of'.

(ii) The abbreviations v.i. (intransitive) and v.t. (transitive) indicate the conjugation of the Kurdish verb and not necessarily the meaning; unless otherwise indicated, however, it may be assumed that the Kurdish and the English do correspond in this respect.

(iii) A causative can be formed by the addition of the infinitive ending -ANDIN (pres. stem. -ÊN) to the present stem of many intransitive verbs. These are not necessarily shown unless they are in particularly common use or have a special meaning. Verbs describing sounds are often causative in form and are therefore conjugated as transitives.

(iv) The passive is normally formed by the addition of the infinitive ending -RAN (pres. stem. -RÊ) to the present stem of a transitive or causative verb, and is not generally shown. Irregularly formed passives are given both under the active verb and independently in the appropriate alphabetical position.

(v) The enclitic adverb -EWE may be added to many verbs, in all parts of the conjugation, to give the meanings 'back', 'again'. These are not necessarily shown, but if -EWE otherwise alters the meaning such a verb is shown after the causative.

(vi) Compound verbs formed with the short adverbs (preverbs) DA, HEL, RA, RO, and WER, or with PÊK, LÊK, TÊK are shown under those words. Certain verbs are commonly quoted by Kurdish grammarians in the infinitive with the prepositions (in their absolute forms) with which they are constructed; these are given under the articles LÊ, PÊ, PÊDA (PIYA), PÊ'WE, TÊ, TÊDA (TIYA), and TÊ'WE. Cross references to these adverbs and prepositions are given at the end of the article on the simple verb.

(vii) The past participles of most intransitive and passive verbs may be used as adjectives; only those are so shown, under the verb, the use of which as adjectives is particularly common. Adjectives formed of a participle compounded with a noun or adjective, if given, appear after the appropriate entry under the noun or adjective (see under section 2 above).

(viii) The following abbreviations are used for the commoner simple verbs: B. (BÛN), BW. (BÛNEWE), D. (DAN), DW. (DANEWE), G. (GIRTIN), GW. (GIRTINEWE), K. (KIRDIN), KW. (KIRDINEWE), N. (NAN), NW. (NANEWE), X. (XISTIN), XW. (XISTINEWE); negatives NEB. (NEBÛN), NEBW. (NEBÛNEWE), etc.

(ix) An asterisk against the English translation indicates that the subject of the English verb is not the same as the subject of the Kurdish verb. This occurs most frequently when it is convenient to translate a Kurdish intransitive by an English transitive or vice versa, when the verb BÛN is used in conjunction with a pronominal affix to give the meaning 'have', or when in the Kurdish the name of a part of the body (e.g. heart, eye) is doing duty for the person.

D. ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Our thanks are due to the British Academy for the generous grant of £750 towards the cost of publication, to the Delegates and staff of the Clarendon Press for their encouragement and advice, and to Miss F. L. Bartrum and Mrs. Hardeman of Hastings for the speed and accuracy of the typing of unfamiliar material. This being, as far as we know, the first dictionary of modern Southern Kirmanji, and indeed the first Kurdish dictionary of any kind since the Dictionnaire Kurde-français by A. Jaba and F. Justi of 1879, to be published in a Western European language, we trust that we may count on the indulgence of readers for inevitable errors of omission and commission.

NOTES

1. In the provinces of Sulaimani, Kirkuk, and Ardalan and southwards the D of many words is softened to the point of being almost inaudible; this softened D is written D; it is not however treated as a separate letter of the alphabet.

2. The consonant Ḥ, H pronounced with a strong expulsion of air from the chest, is softer in Kurdish than in Arabic, alike in Arabic loan words and the few Kurdish words where it occurs. The modern tendency is to substitute Ḥ (H) for Ḥ. For this reason the two have not been treated as distinct letters of the alphabet, but where Ḥ is still likely to be met in writing this is indicated by the dot.

3. The neutral vowel, which has no symbol in the modified Arabic script, generally approximates to a very short i and is so represented in the Roman. In speech it may change position or be dropped entirely in accordance with changes in the stress. The combination iy not followed by a vowel (e.g. as in BI-Y-KUJE 'kill him') is pronounced as i.

4. The vowel i followed, with intervening euphonic y, by another vowel is generally pronounced short and may then be written i, e.g. PERI (fairy), EM PERIYE or EM PERIYE (this fairy). The combination iy not followed by a vowel is pronounced as i.

5. In Sulaimani, Kirkuk, Ardalan, and southwards the nasal combination ng is pronounced as in Eng. 'ring' but farther north as in Eng. 'finger'; it is frequently interchangeable with np.

6. The sound represented by ṭ corresponds to T as p to D; it occurs in the 2 pers. sing. pronominal affix -ṭ, and in a very few other words.

7. Unstressed u followed, with intervening euphonic w, by another vowel is pronounced very short and is often scarcely audible.

8. The vowel û followed, with intervening euphonic w, by another vowel is generally pronounced short and may then be written u, e.g. KEWTÛ (past participle), KEWTÛM 'I have fallen', but KEWTÛWE or KEWTUWE 'he has fallen'.

9. The 'eyn of the modified Arabic script, transliterated ' , is not treated as a separate letter for the purposes of alphabetical arrangement.

10. Initial hemze and hemze between two vowels are not transliterated; juxtaposed vowels are pronounced separately (e.g. BEEN-DAM, BEÏMAN, and BÊABRÛ are words of three syllables). The position of medial hemze between a consonant and a vowel and of final hemze (both very rare) is indicated by apostrophe; elsewhere apostrophe indicates the elision of a vowel.

11. In the Roman script the enclitic copula and the pronominal affixes are linked by a hyphen to the preceding word.

12. In some cases the original Arabic forms of borrowed words have been given after the indication (A); these are transliterated in accordance with standard practice for Arabic.

-e¹ voc. ending: KURE, boy!

-e² defining suf. also used: (1) in conj. w. dem. adjj. EM, EW, e.g. EM KURE, this boy, EW KICHE, that girl, EW SUWARANE, those horse-men, (for exceptions see EM, EW); (2) w. dim. or affectionate connotation, esp. in the shortened forms of personal names and nick-names, e.g. BILE for IBRAHĪM. If the n. defined ends in û euphonic w, and if in any other vowel euphonic y is inserted before -E; this -E attracts the stress. Cf. ~EKE¹ and ²

-e³ used (1) to replace îzafe (y²) when the phrase is qualified by a defining suf. or dem. adjj., the phrase being then treated as a comp. n. e.g. MINAL Y ZĪREK, clever child—MINALE ZĪREKEKE, the clever child—EM MINALE ZĪREKE, this clever child; (2) to replace îzafe to link a permanent epithet to the n. it qualifies, e.g. KĒL Y SHĪN, blue upright stone, makes KĒLESHĪN, name of a stele w. cuneiform inscription on the Iraqi-Persian boundary; (3) in general as a link in the formation of many comp. nn. e.g.: DESKEGUL, bunch of flowers, posy; RESHEBA, black wind, gale; PĪREMĒRD, old man. If the first element of a comp. so formed ends in û euphonic w, and if in î euphonic y, is inserted before the linking E; if it ends in A, E, Ê, O, or Ô, the linking E is absorbed so as to leave the second element in direct juxtaposition w. the first, e.g. GA Y BOR makes GABOREKE, the brown ox.

-e⁴ suf. used in the formation: of nn. from nn., e.g. ANĪSHK, elbow—ANĪSHKE, bracket; nn. from adjj. e.g. CHAK, good—CHAKE, kind act; nn. from nn. qualified by a numeral adj. e.g. CHILROJE, period of forty days; and nn. from verbal roots e.g. KĒSHAN, draw—KĒSHE, toil.

-e⁵ 3 pers. sing. pres. ind. of the copula is; euphonic w and y are inserted as for -E².

e⁶ particle pref. to pres. and imperf. ind. tenses of most vv. Cf. DE², Y².

e⁷ emphasizing particle placed before pronn. and demonstrative adjj. and attracting the stress, e.g.: E MIN, I; E TO, you; E EWE, just that; E ÊRE, just here; E EM BAXE, this very orchard.

e⁸ prep. to; gen. enclitic immediately following a v.; also used to introduce nn. used predicatively; in conj. w. postp. -EWE, into. Examples: EWAN GEYISHTIN E KOSHKEKE, they reached the mansion; MINALEKE BINĒRIN E DEBISTAN, send the child to school; EBĒT E PIYAW, he will become a man; ECHĒT E ESHKEWTEKE'WE, he goes into the cave; euphonic w and y are inserted as for -E². See Ê⁵ and TÊ for the circumstances in which they replace E.

e⁸ *prep. is pref. to certain nn., gen. nn. of place, to form comp. prepp.; the n. governed is not linked to the comp. prep. by îzafe (y²); some of these are used in conj. w. postp. -EWE as indicated after each below: ~BAL, upon (D. ~BAL, attribute to); ~BAN, upon; ~BER, to the front of, towards, (D. ~BER, attack w., e.g. MIN-YAN DA YEER CINĒW, they reviled me; PIYAWKE EDAT EBER XENCER, he attacks the man w. a dagger); ~BIN (-EWE), to below; ~GIYAN, gen. Y

-y¹ inserted in certain cases for euphony between a final vowel and another vowel following in close liaison (but after Û only before Ê and Î), e.g.: GA, GAYEKE, ox, the ox; PERO, PEÛROYÊK, rag, a rag; GERÛ, GERÛYÊK, throat, a throat; MANDÛ, MANDÛYÎ, tired, fatigue; GERA, GERAYEWE, he wandered, he returned.

y² particle known as ÎZAFE principally used:

1. As a defining relat. pron., who, whom, which, e.g.: PIYAWÊKE (or EW PIYAWÊ) Y HAT, the (that) man who came; EW PIYAWÊ Y DÎBÛ-TAN, the man whom you had seen; for the construction of relat. clauses see KE⁶.
2. To link epithet adj. and nm. to the n. which they qualify, e.g.: PIYAW-ÊK Y AZA, a brave man; TIRÊ Y RESH Y SHÎRÎN, sweet black grapes; DESHT Y BÎTWÊN, the Bitwên plain; GÛRÛN Y BIRA-M (but apposition BIRA-M GÛRÛN), my brother Gurun. 3. To link a n. in the genitive relation to the n. it qualifies, e.g.: BIRA Y GÛRÛN, Gurun's brother; TISHK Y ROJ, the sun's rays; DERGA Y KOSHKEKE, the palace gate; BABEKR Y SELÎM, Babakr (son) of Salim. 4. To link a n. or adj., esp. one forming part of a comp. v., to its complement, e.g.: BANG Y KÊ EKEY (also KÊ BANG EKEY), whom are you calling?; FÊR Y KURDÎ-TAN KIRDIM, you taught me Kurdish.

y³ particle pref. to pres. ind. tense of certain vv. having pres. stem beginning w. Ê or HÊ (the H being omitted), e.g.: Y'ÊM, I come (HATIN, pres. stem. Ê); Y'ÊNIM or EHÊNIM, I bring (HÊNAN, pres. stem. HÊN). Cf. DE², E⁶.

-y⁴ (pronounced as pure short i after consonant but coalesces with a prec. vowel) pron. aff. he, she, him, her, his, her, it, its, most commonly used: 1. When the pron. is the d.o. of a trans. v. in the pres. tense. 2. In the genitive relation and so as possessive adj.; it is suf., with intervening euphonic T, to the 3 pers. sing. pres. ind. of the enclitic v. 'to be' in cases where there would otherwise be ambiguity, e.g.: HEYE (where Y is euphonic) there is, but HEYET-Y, he has; EMA GA-YE (Y again euphonic), this is an ox, but EME GA-YET-Y, this is his ox; TY is however sometimes added when there is no danger of confusion, e.g. BARAM BAWK-Y-E or BARAM BAWK-Y-ETY, Bahram is his father. 3. With the prepp. BO, LÊ, PÊ, TÊ, LEGEL, and the postp. Ê. 4. To denote the agent in sentences having a trans. v. in a past tense, see Appendix V; for further explanation of the manner of use of the pron. aff., w. examples, see under -T².

-y⁵ (thus after vowel, -î after consonant), inflexion of 2 pers. sing. of pres. tenses of all vv. and past tenses of intr. vv.; for use of euphonic T after -Y see T¹.

-y⁶ 2 pers. sing. of enclitic v. 'to be', art, are; for use of euphonic -T after -Y see T¹.

(c) THE IRANIAN SOLAR YEAR

The Iranian solar year begins on the day the sun enters Aries (about 21 March) and is divided into 12 months, each of 31 or 30 days except the last which has 28, or in leap years 29. Several Kurdish publicists have endeavoured to introduce Kurdish names for the months; but there has been no uniformity and about 40 different names have been used, applied sometimes to the months of the Iranian calendar, sometimes, less appropriately, to the months of the Gregorian calendar, and in some cases to different months of the same calendar. The following table shows in column 2 the names which are recommended, and in column 3 the corresponding names used on the Persian side of the boundary.

Mar.-Apr.	NÖROJ	FERWERDÎN
Apr.-May	GULAN	ERDÎBEHÎSHT

APPENDIX IV

THE CONJUGATION OF THE VERB

Verbs fall into four groups distinguished by the ending of the infinitive: (1) -DIN, -DIN, or -TIN; (2) -ÎN; (3) -AN; (4) -ÛN. The principal parts are present stem, past stem, and past participle. The present stem of all verbs is given in the Dictionary. The past stem is found by cutting off the -IN or -N of the infinitive. The only two intransitive verbs of group (4), BÛN and CHÛN, have a second, shortened, past stem—BU, CHU; the shortened BU only is used for the auxiliary in the formation of compound tenses. The past participle is formed by adding Û to the past stem if it ends in a consonant, and w if it ends in î or A; in verbs of the fourth group the past stem and the past participle are identical in form.

Specimen paradigms of an intransitive and a transitive verb, each with the present and past stems ending in a consonant, are given below. If either stem ends in a vowel considerations of euphony impose the following minor changes:

(a) The i of the inflexions -IM, -IN, and the i between the past stem and the auxiliary in the compound tenses, disappear, e.g. E-KEW-IM but E-RO-M, KEWT-IM but PERÎ-M, GIRT-I-BU-M but KÊSHA-BU-M.

(b) The i of the inflexions -î(T) and -îN becomes y, e.g. KEWT-î(T) but GORA-Y(T), E-KEW-îN but E-DUWÊ-YN, KEWT-îN but BEZÎ-YN (or BEZÎ-N).

(c) When the inflexion -ê(T) would follow a present stem ending in ê the ê is pronounced and written only once, e.g. E-GERÊ(T) not E-GERÊ-Ê(T).

(d) Where the ending -AYE occurs w is inserted after u and û, y is inserted after î, and the A is elided after A, e.g. BI-BUW-AYE, BI-MAN-DIRÛW-AYE, BI-PERÎY-AYE, BI-GERA-YE.

(e) The 2nd pers. sing. imperative has no inflexion, e.g. BI-GIR-E but BI-RO.

APPENDIX V

THE CONSTRUCTION OF SENTENCES HAVING A TRANSITIVE VERB IN A PAST TENSE

1. The past tenses of all transitive verbs are passive in meaning.
 2. In a sentence the agent is expressed by a pronoun in the affix form: -IM, -IT, -Y, -MAN, -TAN, -YAN. If there is also a noun or an independent pronoun denoting the agent, this is placed separately at the beginning of the sentence but is not constructed as an integral part of it.
 3. If the subject is expressed by a noun or independent pronoun this is placed as far forward as possible and the pronoun denoting the agent is affixed to it:

BEXTYAR, DESESIREKE-Y KIRDEWE—the handkerchief was untied by him, Bakhtyar—Bakhtyar untied the handkerchief.

BEXTYAR, KE EME-Y BÎST—when this was heard by him, Bakhtyar—when Bakhtyar heard this.
 4. The noun or independent pronoun denoting the person or thing indirectly affected by the action may be constructed as the subject; in this case the pronoun denoting the agent is affixed to the word denoting the person or thing directly affected:

BARAM, BANG-Y KIRDÎN—we were invited by him, Bahram—Bahram invited us.

KAGHEZEKE-TAN DIRÎWIM—I have had (my) letter torn up by you—you have torn up my letter.

HÎCH DENG-U-BASÊK-IT BO NEGÊRAWIMET-EWE—I have had no piece of news related to (me) by you—you have not related any piece of news to me.

SERBURDEKE-M BO GÊRAYEWE—he had the occurrence related to (him) by me—I related the occurrence to him.

PAREYÊK Y ZOR-Y LÊ WER GIRTÎN—we had a large sum of money taken from (us) by him—he received a large sum of money from us.

KAREKERÊK Y ZOR-IM TÊ XIST—it had put into (it) a large number of maidservants by me—I put a large number of maidservants there.

HÎCH-YAN NEDAM Ê—I had nothing given to (me) by them—they gave me nothing.

FÊL-IT LEGEĻA KIRDÎN—we had a trick
- played with (us) by you—you played a trick on us.
- EM KARESATE-MAN BESERA HÊNA—he had this calamity brought upon (him) by us—we brought this calamity upon him.
5. If the sentence contains no noun or independent pronoun denoting the person or thing directly affected, the pronoun denoting the agent may be affixed to:
 - (a) the complement of the predicate;
 - (b) an adverb or adverbial phrase;
 - (c) any of the short adverbs used in the formation of compound verbs, viz. DA, HEL, BA, RO, WER, or a preposition in the absolute form (LÊ, PÊ, TÊ, and BO);
 - (d) the negative prefix NE- or the tense and mood particles E- and BI-.

Examples:

FÊR Y KURDÎ-YAN KIRDIM—I was taught Kurdish by them—they taught me Kurdish.

BE CINOKE-MAN ZANÎ—he was taken for a jinni by us—we took him for a jinni.

LESER ERZEKE-Y RA XIST—it was spread out on the floor by him—he spread it out on the floor.

CHEND CAR-IM WUTÛWE—how often has it been said by me—how often have I said?

WA-M ZANÎBU KE . . .—it had been thought thus by me that . . .—I had thought that. . .

DERGAWAN, PÊ-Y WUTIM—I had said to (me) by him, the doorkeeper—the doorkeeper said to me.

RA-YAN KÊSHA YE DEREWE—he was dragged out by them—they dragged him out.

NE-MAN-DIRÎBU—it had not been torn by us—we had not torn it.

BI-TAN-GIRTINAYE—if they had been taken by you—if you had taken them.
 6. If there is in the sentence no word or phrase of the kinds set out above to which the pronoun denoting the agent can be affixed it is inserted into the body of the verb immediately before the inflexion

(except that of the 3rd person singular, which follows the inflexion):

RENCANDÛ-TAN-ÎN—we have been offended by you—you have offended us.

KUSHT-YAN—he was killed by them—they killed him.

CERDEKAN, GIRTIBU-YAN-IM—I had been captured by them, the brigands—the brigands had captured me.

CERDEKE, GIRTIBUM-Y—I had been captured by him, the brigand—the brigand had captured me.

but with the postposition Ê:

XUWA, DA-Y-M Ê—I had it given to (me) by Him, God—God gave it to me.

7. Passives having the infinitive ending in -RAN (-RÊ) and conjugated in all tenses like ordinary intransitive verbs are generally used when no agent is mentioned; the agent may however be mentioned with the compound preposition LELAYEN 'by'. On the other hand a transitive verb with the pronominal affix of the 3rd person plural is often used in a quite general sense so that KUJRA and KUSHT-YAN would give much the same meaning, 'he was killed by a person or persons unknown'.

1. Bakhtyar and Badbakht were two brothers in one (living in the same) village. One day they decided to go to town to make money; and the very next morning they left home and set out together. Each had put his parcel of food for one day into a red handkerchief and had tied it round his waist.

2. By midday they reached a spring. They said, 'Let us have a halt here from our march and eat our midday meal by it'; and they sat down beside the spring.

3. Then Badbakht turned to Bakhtyar: 'Bakhtyar, let us eat your food parcel for midday, and (keep) my parcel for our evening meal.' Bakhtyar said, 'All right'.

4. Bakhtyar undid the handkerchief (tied to) his waist and spread it on the ground. Then they ate all of what was in it and rested for a time and (then) resumed their journey.

5. Evening overtook them. The (nearest) village was still a long way off (when) they reached a fork in the road where there was a spring. This time Bakhtyar turned to Badbakht and said, 'Badbakht, I am very hungry and the village, it is clear, is a long way off too; let us sit down here, have supper, and then resume the journey.'

6. Badbakht said, 'O dear no; by God, I shall not give you a share from my food parcel; it will just be enough for myself.'

7. Bakhtyar, when he saw this caddish behaviour, was dumbfounded and only just managed to say, 'In that case, Badbakht, I shall not go along any more with an ill-natured person like you; of these two roads choose one for yourself; you take that road and I will take the other one.' Badbakht chose one of the roads for himself, Bakhtyar followed the other road, and they separated from each other.

mill. After him Wolf strode in, and then in quick succession Leopard appeared, Hyena turned up, Jackal came, and Fox arrived.

10. When these had all collected and gone into committee Lion turned to Fox: 'Fox, son of a dog, where are you (have you been)? Nothing is seen of you; it is a long time that you have not related any piece of gossip to me.'

11. Fox said, 'Sir, nothing has happened so important that I should report it to my lord; but I have obtained two fresh pieces of information which I will now relate to you. In this deserted mill there is a mouse who has twelve pieces of gold; every morning when the sun shines into the mill this mouse brings out these pieces of gold, spreads them out in the sunlight, and plays with them; when the sun has gone off he picks them up and carries them back to his hole; moreover, that little mound that is behind the mill—seven small water-pots full of gold are hidden in it.

12. The king of the beasts, when he heard this, thanked Uncle Fox; and after some further discussion they dispersed.

13. When Bakhtyar had heard this conversation he could not sleep any more; he was waiting for sunrise. The first glow appeared, day dawned, the sun raised its head out above the horizon and climbed slowly upwards, and the first rays of sunshine took possession of the mill. Bakhtyar, who had crouched down in a hiding-place, was holding his breath, and was casting his eyes rapidly over the holes in the wall; he was uncertain whether Uncle Fox had told the truth.

14. Suddenly from a hole something glittered. A mouse's head, with something glittering in its mouth, came out from the hole. The mouse after looking carefully round the inside of the room and satisfying himself that no stranger was there, came out from the hole and set the glittering object down in the sunshine. This was a piece of gold. The mouse went back into his hole and brought out another piece of gold. In this way he spread out twelve pieces of gold in front of the hole. Then he began to play with them.

15. Bakhtyar, who had restrained himself until that moment, picked up a handful of earth and threw it on to the pieces of gold. The mouse took fright and ran back into his hole. Bakhtyar went, collected the pieces of gold, put them into his pocket, and came out from the mill. Then Bakhtyar went to deal with the pots of gold and found them also.

16. And so he had become very rich. He proceeded to buy a large plot of land and to build and lay out there a majestic mansion and orchard; he equipped it with valuable furniture and stores, and put numerous men-servants and maidservants in it. Moreover he had made for it four gates, and beside each gate he had built a room, and had placed in them porous jars and pots of cold water and benches and chairs. He had also told the gate-keepers to bring to him any traveller who heaved a sigh after drinking water. The fame of these rooms for drinking water soon spread abroad. Every day many travellers used to turn aside and drink cold water and rest there.

17. One day a traveller came into the room and quaffed a cup of water and, when he had finished, heaved a sigh. The door-keeper immediately went up to him and told him that the owner requested that he would go to him. The traveller was taken to Bakhtyar. When they saw each other they immediately recognized each other. This was Badbakht. Bakhtyar jumped up from his place, put his arms round his neck, kissed him on this side and on that side, and set him down by his side.

18. After a few inquiries Bakhtyar said, 'Dear brother, as you see this mansion is mine; God gave it to me and I have achieved my object. Now I am very rich. It is clear that you have obtained nothing. You see that, thank God, I have (plenty). We are brothers. I will divide what I possess with you, the half of it for you, the half of it for me. I have much; it will be enough for both of us, and to spare.

19. Badbakht, without manifesting any gratification or thanking this magnanimous brother of his, said, 'You must tell me, Bakhtyar, where and how you obtained this wealth. I also will go and find it like you.'

20. However much Bakhtyar sought to dissuade him and told him that he had obtained this wealth by a most unusual and extraordinary chance that would not occur (be seen) again, and that that wealth which he had would be enough for both of them, it was of no avail. Badbakht persisted and forced him to relate what had happened. When Bakhtyar had finished speaking Badbakht could rest no longer and dashed out in the direction of the mill.

21. When Badbakht arrived at the deserted mill the evening twilight was already over. He went inside and, just as Bakhtyar had done, he hid behind the water-drop.

27. Minîsh hatimewe w hîch-yan neçam ê.¹

22. The night had become quite dark when a lion suddenly strode in and squatted in the middle of the mill. After him the members such as Leopard, Wolf, Hyena, Jackal, and Fox all collected and committee was formed.

23. Then Lion turned to Uncle Fox: 'Fox, son of a dog, why is it so long that you have not related any gossip to me.'

24. Fox said, 'Sir, what shall I report to my lord? Last time when I was relating those pieces of information to you here, a human had hidden himself on the other side of the water-drop and had heard everything. When daylight returns he seizes the mouse's pieces of gold and goes and brings out the pots of gold also. And now, as you may see, he has built himself a mansion with that money and is living in it. So for that reason, before I relate anything to you, we ought to have a look round the inside of the mill lest this time too a bastard human may have hidden himself in it.

25. When Lion heard this he said, 'Now then, get on with it, search the mill; God willing this evening's supper may come out of it for us.'

26. The beasts with one accord jumped up from their places. As soon as they went to the far side of the water-drop they found Badbakt, rushed upon him, dragged him out, tore him in pieces in front of Lion and all together ate him up.

27. I too have come back and they gave me nothing.
