

Marriage

Written by Azad Karimi

Marriage is a heavy commitment and you should fully accept it. If I had known that I could accept this commitment, which includes heavy conditions, I would have accepted it willingly, for example, I would have gotten married in 2000.

It was not because of my ignorance, fear and inadequacy, it was because of my sense of responsibility that at one point I decided not to get married so that my circumstances would be perfect. So, if a person thinks he should get married, just so that others don't blame him, don't do it because it will hurt you and the other person emotionally.

I do not preach, but I say these words from a point of view that I consider the benefit, comfort and peace of myself first, then other.

I swear to God, if you love someone, even if he is the ugliest person in the world, you will do anything for him, because your heart and feelings give you orders, and man is a slave to his own feelings. But if you don't love someone, the reason is that you haven't closed the gate of the castle tightly (heart), you haven't closed the window of the room completely, it is in the cold of winter that you see the cold coming in from that window, and it means that you are nostalgic and you blame others for not allowing you to reach your love. Babe! it's useless...

Be free and think it right, and when you feel that you are happy and free in the commitment of marriage, get married and feel happy with him who becomes your life partner and give him this feeling, provided that he-she feels the same as you to have and not see his captivity in marriage.

And this is another big challenge that you have to discover whether the person who married you feels freedom and happiness in this commitment or not?

And you just come to this sentence of Hamlet which says: "To be, or not to be, that is the question".

And suddenly everything gets complicated!